

DEUTSCHES NATIONALTHEATER AND STATE ORCHESTRA WEIMAR

Opera, drama and concerts

The successor of the Weimar Court Theatre, whose director was once Goethe. The neoclassical structure was completed in 1908. Over the decades, it has been rebuilt a number of times and also hosted several important political events, the best-known of which is the foundation of the Weimar Republic. Nowadays the German National Theatre is home to the most important theatrical company in Thuringia as well as the Staatskapelle Weimar orchestra.

The Stages

The „Große Haus“ was constructed in the year 1975 and renovated during the 1990s. With its 857 seats the „Große Haus“ claims the second rank of the biggest halls in the city. A prime highlight of the „Hoftheater“ (Courttheatre) was and still is the light-flooded classical saloon on the first floor. The stage of the theatre has 87 seats and is located at the Foyer III. As an innovative center of theater and play, the E-Werk has emphasized itself because it maintains the old steam-hall and the kettle-hall. It was build 1887 as a powerstation and started operating a year later under directory of Siemens.

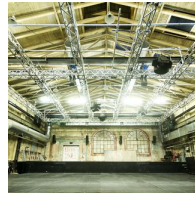

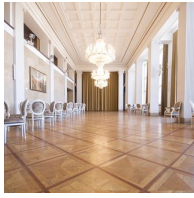

The „Weimarahalle“ earned the position as the host of the symphony concerts by the „Staatskapelle Weimar“ since the opening in 1999.

Under professionell guidance the D.A.S. youth-theatre supports young theatre-groups in the rooms of the „Stellwerk“.
